BRIGHAM YOUNG.

Career of the Mormon Prophets.

THE INIQUITIES WHICH HE UPHELD.

"The Church of Latter Day Saints."

[From the N. Y. Tribune.]
(Concluded.)

BRIGHAM'S WIVES.

It was never easy to ascertain in Salt Lake City how many wives Brigham had. The Gentiles had different reports, and the Mormons, when questioned, usually replied that they did not meddle with "the President's" family affairs. The most authentic accounts in late years placed the number at twenty-three, and the number of women "sealed" to him brought the total up to fifty-two. In 1866 he had twenty-nine regular wives, who were named and described in a work by Mrs. C. V. Waite, called "The Mormon Prophet and his Harem," published by Hurd & Houghton. Most of them lived in a building called the "Lion House," and had rooms like boarders in a hotel. The first wife had a house to herself, however, and for the favorite, Amelia Folsom, who usually accompanied Brigham to the theatre and in his drives, a handsome dwelling was built, with a private passage leading to the President's office. In his later life Brigham established homes in a number of the smaller towns of the Territory, which he had occasion now and then to visit. One of his wives—about the twentieth in order—Eliza Snow, was a woman of some intellectual ability and a writer of poetry. Brigham practiced entire impartiality in the allotment of affection and worldly comforts among plural wives, but in practice, like Lister Sultans, he was usually ruled by a favorite. As to the prophet's children, their number is large. He provided carefully for their education. Some of his sons exhibit good business talent, one being the President of the Salt Lake Railroad. Many of the daughters grew up to be useful and accomplished women. He firmly instilled his religious fanaticism into their minds, and gave them, as they came of age, in polygamous marriage to his prominent supporters. Two of them married the same man at the same time, it is said. The fifteenth or according to some reckonings, the nineteenth wife was Ann Eliza, whom he married in 1868, and who has recently earned celebrity by lecturing on the horrors of Mormonism and suing the Prophet for a divorce. The United States Court at Salt Lake City denied the petition on the ground that the marriage was polygamous, and therefore null.

There is not space here to go into the history of polygamy as it rose and flourished in the Mormon Church. It reached its climax in Utah in 1865, when a general demoralization seized upon the community and the most abominable practices prevailed, whole families of girls being in some cases married with their mother to the same man. Divorces became exceedingly frequent, and there were instances of women being divorced and remarried nine or ten times. Vulgarity of language in public discourses and private speech became so common that many Mormons were themselves disgusted, and a reaction set in. A powerful influence working against polygamy in late years has been the increase of the cost of living in Utah, which has restrained the young men from following the precepts and examples of their elders. It is as much as they want to do to support one wife, now that the women are no longer satisfied with a sun-bonnet and a calico dress, but must have the latest fashions in apparel, and must live like the Gentiles, instead of on corn and potatoes, as in the early days of the Territory.

THE COURTS AGAINST POLYGAMY.

Only one serious effort was ever made to break down this institution of polygamy by the aid of the Courts. During the year 1871 the Federal officials in Utah headed by Chief Justice McKean of the Supreme Court of the Territory, began an organized attack upon the polygamists, which necessarily involved a personal attack upon Brigham Young. At the September term of that Court, objections were made to the acceptance of several Mormons of prominence as grand jurors on the ground that they were living in open violation of the law of the land in practicing polygamy. Chief Justice McKean rendered a characteristic decision, sustaining the challenges with a florid eloquence seldom heard on the bench, and combatting the argument that polygamy was a religious practice, and could therefore claim the benefit of a religious toleration secured by the Constitution. He closed his opinion by declaring that "when the burglar is a fit juror to inquire into the crime of burglary; when the robber is a fit juror to inquire into the crime of larceny, when the assassin is a fit juror to inquire into the crime of murder—then the bigamist, who swears in substance that his crimes are his religion, may be a fit juror to inquire into the crimes of bigamy and adultery." The Judge concluded: "But, thanks to centuries of Christian civilization, that time is not now, and judging from the steady progress of the human race, that time will never come." At the same term of court a number of prominent Mormons were indicted under a statute of the Territory which prescribed a penalty of imprisonment (not exceeding ten years and not less than six months) and a fine to the crime of unlawful cohabitation "or open and gross lewdness." Brigham Young himself was among those indicted, as was also Daniel A. Wells, Mayor of Salt Lake City. Young was brought before the court on the 3d of October. Judge McKean refused to allow him to give bail, but granted him the privilege of being imprisoned in his own house. The Judge also overruled a motion to quash the indictments. One conviction was reached under these suits; that of Thomas Hawkins, whose first wife brought suit against him for adultery. He was sentenced to three years hard labor and a fine of $500, Judge McKean explaining that he did not wish his judgment to be "so severe as to seem vindictive, or so light as to seem to trifle with justice."

This passage from his speech in passing sentence was evidently aimed at the head of the Mormon Church: "My experience in Utah has been such that, were I to fine you only, I am satisfied the fine would be paid out of other funds than yours, and thus you would go free—absolutely free—from all punishment; and, then those men who mislead the people would make thousands of others believe that God had sent the money to pay the fine; that God had prevented the Court from sending you to prison; that by a miracle you had been rescued from the authorities of the United States. I must look to it that my judgment gives no aid and comfort to such men." No other conviction was ever reached, either in these cases or in the indictments found subsequently against Young and others for the murder of Buck at Iron Springs, in 1857, about the time of the conflict with Cummings, the newly appointed Territorial Governor. These indictments were evidently brought in the hope that they might help to break the Mormon leaders but they came to nothing. The funds of the Court were insufficient to defray the expenses of these trials, and Judge McKean and Attorney-General Bates visited Washington and applied to Congress in December, 1871, for an appropriation. But such slight prospect as existed of their getting funds to carry on the war against Young was destroyed by a unanimous decision of the United States Supreme Court reversing one of Judge McKean's test cases. In this he had advanced an absurd and fantastical theory to the effect that the Supreme Court of the Territory of Utah was in some way a part of, or allied to, the Supreme Court of the United States. The decision of the Court showed plainly that Judge McKean was either ignorant of the law, or willing to pervert it to gain his object, and the judicial crusade against Mormonism was over. It had never gained any great popular sympathy, as it was evidently a fight made by one faction to war upon another rather than an honest attempt to do away with a great evil.

THE DANITES.

The blackest spots in the history of the Mormon church are the murders and crimes committed by the "Danites." This was the name given to an organization of cut throats who committed the most atrocious crimes without suffering the slightest penalty of the law, or forfeiting the favor of the Mormon leaders, under whose orders it was often evident that they were acting. It was a sworn society, the members being pledged, according to the confession of John D. Lee, "to obey all orders of the priesthood of the Mormon Church, to do any and all things as commanded." From this order were selected "the Destroying Angels of the Mormon Church," who undoubtedly acted under the personal direction of Young himself. Books on books might be filled with the record of their brutal murders, mysterious or unconcealed, assassinations, as it was thought best, and wholesale massacres. Many of the instances already on record would seem incredible if it had not long ago been seen that the number and atrocity of these crimes could hardly be exaggerated. One instance that is narrated is that of the revenge which Hickman, the "Danite" captain, took upon a man by the name of Drown, who sued him upon a promissory note. A few days after Drown had obtained judgment on the note, he was in a friend's house in Salt Lake City, when Hickman and seven or eight of the "Danites" appeared and called to Drown to come out. He refusing, they dismounted, burst in the doors, and shot the offending Drown and his friend. Both dying of their wounds. The "Danites" were not molested. At the same term of Court a sergeant named Pike, in the United States forces was indicted for assault with intent to kill, upon the son of a Mormon Bishop named Spencer. Pike was arrested and brought to Salt Lake City, and the next day was shot by Spencer who stepped up behind him for that purpose. Spencer then fled with the "Danites." This was all in revenge for a blow, and a leading Mormon paper commended the young man for his bravery. The courts took no action in either. Ann Eliza Young, Brigham's rebellious wife after charging upon him the crime of organizing and directing this murderous band narrates this incident as illustrating their methods. "Henry Jones and his mother lived in a house near where I lived when a girl. We were startled from our sleep one night by loud cries and pistol shots. No one took any notice at the time but in the morning a wagon was driven through the streets of the city, containing the dead bodies of the murdered mother and son, with a placard attached, 'Apostates, Beware!' This was done expressly to terrorize the people. Another and more notable instance of the Danite sanguinary spirit was the 'Morrisite massacre.' One Morris in 1860 took with others, to start an offshoot of the church. He alleged that Brigham was a false prophet, and the only true one. He went, with his followers, about thirty miles to the north of Salt Lake City, and encamped there. Brigham Young quickly dispatched under command of Daniel H. Wells, Lieutenant-General of the Nauvoo Legion and other name for Danites. They were all massacred. Whether true or not, these statements are of a kind with many that are known to be true about this secret society of assassins. Whenever it was necessary to remove an ambitious Mormon or an obnoxious Gentile, to exterminate a whole settlement of surprise and destroy an emigrant train, these men were ready for the work. They were proficient in all varieties of murder, and the list horrible of their deeds was sufficient to prove the existence of that reign of terror which it was their business to sustain, and on which Young's authority so much depended.

CHARACTER AND APPEARANCE.

Brigham Young grew immensely rich. He owned farms, mines and factories, and had large deposits in the Bank of England. Probably his fortune amounted to several millions, but how much he chose to regard as belonging to himself, and how much to the Church, is not yet known. In person he was tall and stoutly built, and during the last ten years rather corpulent. He had a large head, a broad, florid countenance, reddish hair, and a fringe of beard of the same color, and a pair of small, keen blue eyes. His habitual expression was bland and oily. At seventy he was active and vigorous, and looked no older than many men of fifty. Bayard Taylor who visited the Prophet at Salt Lake City in 1870, gave the following description of him: "I was ushered into a handsome, well furnished room, divided by a wooden screen from a dim back office. The floor was carpeted, a circular table with a great globe of gold fish, was in the centre, sofas and chairs were on either side, and the walls were covered with pictures—portraits of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, Alpine landscapes, and a chromo of Bierstadt's 'Sunshine and Shadow,' which the artist had sent to Brigham Young. We took seats upon one of the sofas, while two or three strangers apparently Mormons from the country, waited on the opposite one. In a few minutes Brigham Young came out from his office. At the first glance you would take him to be a successful bank or railroad president, and his quick, straight-forward, business-like manner carries out the impression. After he is seated, however, and you have a chance of observing his features more closely, the signs of a quality with which bank presidents are not accustomed to deal begin to manifest themselves. He is both short and broad, but his thickness gives the impression of strength rather than corpulence. Although sixty-nine years old, there is no gray in his sandy hair and his small blue eyes are keen and full of power. His head is large and approaching to squareness in its form, and his complexion is a strong, healthy red. His thin firm-set mouth and large jaws express an indomitable energy. The general expression of his face is at once reticent and watchful. In his greeting there was the blandness of an acquired rather than a natural courtesy. His voice is mild even-toned and agreeable, and I can imagine that he might make himself fascinating to women, most of whom find a peculiar charm in a playful and purring lion. He said but little at first, and, I thought, seemed to be holding himself secretly at bay for questions which I did not intend to ask. By-and-by, when I referred to the similarity of the scenery to that of Asia Minor, and led the conversation to the resources of the Territory, he spoke freely and fluently, and gave me considerable information concerning the remote southern counties. On all points of material growth he was frankly communicative. While he was talking I studied his face sufficiently to detect the three chief qualities of his nature—great shrewdness, great determination, and great belief in himself.

The reverence of the orthodox Mormons for Brigham Young exceeded that of Catholics for the Pope, and they sought his counsel in all important business and family affairs. They believed him a God in embryo, destined to reign over a celestial kingdom in the future life. In his death the Mormon Church has undoubtedly received a fatal blow. All its men of intellect and force of character joined it in its infancy, and but few of them are left. Its later proselytes were drawn from the ignorant classes. Among the second generation, young men in middle life, no one has developed capacity for successfully wearing the mantle of the Prophet.

HOW TO HAVE GOOD HOUSE PLANTS.

Flowers scattered ... and ... and ... everywhere ...

To grow plants to perfection is not an easy thing to do, still the pleasure derived from them amply repays us for the time and labor given. In the selection of plants great care must be exercised to procure those we have the best deception of. The amount of heat, light, water and ventilation, needful for the well-being of plants varies with different species, and it is necessary to thoroughly understand their peculiarities to be able to raise such as will be to us both a pride and pleasure.

After selecting plants, particular attention should be given to preparing the soil, most plants requiring it to be very rich. There are four kinds of soil in use, viz., leaf mold, loam, sand and either common or river sand peat, these are generally mixed. As a general rule, one part loam, two parts sand, one part peat, two parts manure and four parts leaf mold, I have found best for most plants, a few requiring it a little richer and a very few thriving best in poorer earth. Sunlight and ventilation are absolute necessities, and if one has neither a western or a southern window it is almost useless to try to grow anything except Ivies. And herein lies one of the unknown obstacles that lovers (but not understanders) of flowers meet with. We often hear persons exclaim, "It's no use for me to try and raise flowers; they die in spite of all the care I take of them," when could the truth be shown, the plants only need air and sunlight. But though we may give them light, fresh air, and proper soil, still, if we neglect thorough watering and washing, our plants soon show their need of both. The proper time for watering is either in the morning or evening, once a day being sufficient. The earth should never be dusty or muddy. The water should be lukewarm, and had better be too warm than too cold, the latter being liable to produce chilling.

When washing plants use water of the same temperature as you would for watering. If they are very dirty add a little hard soap to the water. Wash both sides of the leaves, using a soft sponge or small syringe, about once a week, the stems and branches (hard-wooded) should be sponged once in three or four weeks. Never let your plants stand in the sun while they are wet, for fear of scorching it, and avoid wetting the flowers.

The insects that infest house plants are a source of trouble and annoyance. The most troublesome are the green fly, mealy bug and the red spider. The mealy bug acts as though clothing... of the little pests must be removed ... and the plants washed frequently with warm soap suds. For the green fly, ... Plants ... should be kept ... and ... The red spider ... should be very careful ... shade ... the course of ... time.

The News says that the water in the Saco river rose by the freshet of Aug. 30th so rapidly that Mrs. J... and ... and a man of Fryeburg, riding along the low intervale road, narrowly escaped drowning. All that saved them from drowning was the swiftness of the current, which carried them to a log or stump, on which they gained a foothold. The horse succeeded in reaching a more shallow place where he was finally rescued. Mr. Jerome Fellows, who was on his "Island Farm," saw the catastrophe and rescued them. While this scene was being enacted, Mr. Joshua Taylor of Bridgton, and Geo. Ross of Sweden, were roosting up in a tree, along with a dog and gun, where they had been driven by the rising waters from the meadow in which they were endeavoring to save their hay crop. Here they were compelled to remain from noon time till 4 P. M., when they were rescued by Mr. Fellows, after he had assisted the parties already mentioned. The same day, and prior to these events, Mr. Fellows, apprised of the freshet then sweeping down the Saco valley, rallied a force of twenty men and secured his crops—two hundred bushels of potatoes and two acres of oats—before the water had covered his Island Farm.

Terrible Fire in New York.

MANY LIVES LOST.

Conflicting Reports as to Numbers

The Loss Over $300,000.

A Serious Fire—Rumor that Ten Persons Perish in the Flames

NEW YORK, Sept 3. A fire on west [illegible] street this afternoon extended from Hale's piano factory to the south side of the street destroying the entire block between 10th and 11th avenues, Connolly's [illegible] factory, Graham & Co's silk factory and several houses adjoining the same, also Walker's charcoal factory north of 35th street and a block of frame houses between 35th and 36th streets. A steam fire engine was burned. It is rumored that ten persons perished in the piano factory.

Further Details—A Hundred Lives Lost—A Heartrending Scene

The Evening Telegram's report of the fire [illegible] piano factory says all hands were at work when the fire started and [illegible] number must be more or less injured. Two bodies have been recovered and it is feared that a hundred lives are lost. Wives and families of workmen are sobbing and wailing about the ruins. There is now no hope that a single vestige of the block bounded by 35th and 36th streets and 10th and 11th avenues will be left. It was painfully evident as the fire spread that there was little chance of the workmen ever getting out alive. About 5000 persons were gathered about the fire. Sparks fired the Gospel tent on 34th street and it was consumed.

The Post Says

the factory was an eight story building and the flames spread with extraordinary rapidity. The firemen could probably have prevented the flames spreading but for the inadequate water supply. The tenants of houses were unable to obtain water except from gutters. The lowest estimate of the loss is one million of dollars. The rumors of the loss of life are conflicting. It is probable that one workman in the piano factory were unable to escape. Edward Puckran [illegible] fatally injured by jumping from a window. Two others were seriously hurt. A woman died during the fire but whether by attempting to escape from the building or from excitement is not stated. Twenty five or thirty girls employed in the upper stories of the factory perished. Ambulances have removed 15 or 20 wounded who jumped from the burning factory. The fire is under control but [illegible] watching to prevent [illegible]

Terrible Scenes Described

The Post's third edition says Hale's factory is the same one that fell when built six years ago killing a number of persons. The cause of the fire is unknown. A workman from the top floor said the alarm was first given by a man who took [illegible] out of the window and said the smoke [illegible] from windows below. There were [illegible] workmen on that floor. The fire and smoke drove them back from the stairway but there were fire ladders and chains [illegible] escapes at the end of the building. Lewis Smith's house was burned while he was at work. He was unable to find his four years old daughter and fear she burned to death. The occupants of houses in 34th street assert that they could see the factory workmen making efforts to escape from the roof of upper stories and hear shrieks [illegible]. The Commercial reports 300 families rendered penniless.

The Fire Originated

in the sounding board of the drying room on the third floor where a steam pipe was used for heating [illegible] having been [illegible] A spark from the stove is supposed to have [illegible] some of the dry material [illegible] instantly that part of the building was [illegible] The factory was eight stories high [illegible] still the [illegible] employed were still out [illegible] [illegible] have been [illegible] perhaps 20. They ran to the roof and to the windows and one dropped to the ground. There was in the neighborhood consequently there was one delay before the engines played on the fire. Several alarms were sent and in haste. Finally the water was obtained from the 8th avenue and the river. Meanwhile the fire extended and the piano factory was a mass of flames and the walls began falling. Some accounts say that on the time on 36th street at least of the upper stories and were buried in the falling debris. They could not be reached by ladders and the flames drove back the firemen. One man dropped before the wall fell and was picked up dead. Others were only injured and taken to the Bellevue Hospital. The inmates of tenement 405, 407 and 409 west 36th street, generally escaped. One woman died, from fright and a little girl Annie Smith, was suffocated. The wife and three other children of Louis Smith the father are missing. The flames spread to adjacent buildings in the block and with Hall's establishment Graham's silk factory, Walker's charcoal factory and Connelly's barrel factory and a number of tenement houses and saloon were destroyed. The buildings of this block fronting on 10th avenue were gutted and the rear portion a saloon and a small store were burned also three tenements in the middle of that block. No lives were lost there.

The Whole Loss of Property will reach $300 000. By 1[illegible] o'clock the fire was entirely under control and the streams of water were turned on the 36th street side. It is stated that a number of bodies will be found at the spot. The Fire Commissioners are of the opinion that none except the employes were burned and say the reports of the loss of life have been exaggerated.

The Turks Acknowledge Heavy Losses

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept 3. The Turks acknowledge the loss of 7 000 in [illegible] Shipka Pass. Two thousand wounded reached [illegible] yesterday.

From Shipka Pass

Intelligence from Shipka Pass states that Suleiman Pasha has gained a more advantageous position for his batteries on the heights surrounding. Russian reinforcements arrive during the night, the road to Gabrova being commanded by Turkish batteries.

Reported Losses

Official statements of the Russian loss on the 31st of August are as follows: At Radikoi [illegible] killed and 30 wounded, at Pellisat, 1050 killed and wounded. The Turkish loss was enormous near the village of Pellisat alone 300 dead were counted. The [illegible] between Rustchuk and Giurgevo continues. No loss on our side is reported.

Not Much of a Fight.

LONDON, Sept 2. Hobart Pasha writes to the Levant Herald declaring utterly fictitious the published details of the alleged fight between the Turkish iron clad Boulend and the Russian merchant steamer Vesta. The vessels never were within two miles of each other. The iron clad received only one shot. The captain did not hear that he injured the Russian steamer and did not pursue her as his vessel was overladen with deck cargo. The foregoing is corroborated by a letter from the Turkish chief of naval staff at Varna, from which it appears he chased the Vesta a few hours and fired seven shells but finally abandoned the pursuit as hopeless.

A Correspondent's Description of the Situation in Shipka Pass.

The London Daily News has a telegram from a special correspondent describing his visit to Shipka Pass on Friday last. He says Suleiman Pasha has abandoned the attempt on the Russian position and gone away from the neighborhood of Shipka. Some say he is still at Kazanlik and others that he is searching for another pass. My belief is that he is engaged in trying to reorganize his shattered forces. There remain still confronting the Russians a few battalions of Egyptians with some cannon on the heights and a few more miscellaneous battalions. In the village of Shipka several Russian reinforcements have been marched back and Gen. Nepokaitschitzky, the chief of staff, was returning from his visit to the Pass quite relieved and satisfied with the position.

THE SILK THIEVES

In the year 1875 [illegible] Walker of this city was in pursuit of two men by the name of Smith and Hamilton for stealing certain silks from the stores of J. T. Rines & Co. and Williams & Getchell in this city on the night of May 8th the following account of which we published at the time.

Smith and Hamilton recently arrested at Greenport [illegible] have been identified beyond a doubt as the men who stole the silk from the stores of J. T. Rines & Co. and Williams & Getchell in this city, on the night of May 8th, and made their escape in a small sloop belonging to Mark S. Weeks of Brewer on the Saturday following. Detective Walker of this city, who went on to New London, Ct., to attend their preliminary examination on Friday last informs us that the burglars were bound over in the sum of $5000 each to appear at the Supreme Court to answer to the charge of committing two burglaries in New London. We gave a short time since an account of their operations along shore. They broke into and rifled two stores in Martha's Vineyard, two in New London and two in Newport, R. I., their plunder amounting to over $20 000, nearly all of which was silks which have been recovered. They painted the sloop black and otherwise changed its appearance, but overlooked the two names written in pencil in the cuddy which Mr Walker [illegible] extensively advertised, and the vessel was thereby identified. Mr Walker brought back with him a jimmy which Mr Fellows identified as the one he made for Hamilton before the burglary, and a hat identified by Mr Hayes as that bought by one of the burglars when they purchased the trunks the silks were packed in. The chain of evidence is thus made perfect. Besides the charge of the New London burglary seven warrants have been issued by officers in other places against the rogues, but Mr Walker has a [illegible] warrant for the Bangor burglaries [illegible] the New London affair so that if by any chance they are not held there they will be brought to this city.

On reading the dispatch in yesterday's issue stating that two men by the name of Hamlin and Allen had succeeded in getting out of their cells at the Connecticut State prison and on being discovered by the night watchman he shot him near the heart causing a wound which produced death, Mr Walker [illegible] been waiting for Hamilton and Smith to serve out their sentence. In that place that he might bring them to this city, informs us that there is no doubt but what Hamlin and Allen and Hamilton and Smith are the same parties [illegible] will hardly have an opportunity to take them on that charge.

Milo Items

Between Saturday night and Monday morning the cheese factory at Milo was broken open and several cheese stolen.

The Milo High school began its fall session yesterday morning, under the instruction of Mr. A. W. Gilman, of Foxcroft. This is the third fall Mr. Gilman has taught this school, and his usual good success is again expected. The village primary also began with Miss Dora Gould as teacher. She is also an experienced teacher.

Ward Scripture is making extensive repairs on his mill in this place. He has built a new flume to the saw mill, and is putting up a new two-story building for a planer and other machinery.

Things political are lively and somewhat mixed, so far as Milo is concerned at least. Three nominations for County Commissioner are all from Milo, viz. H. F. Daggett, Republican, Isaac Hanscom, Democrat, M. L. Durgin, Greenback. Then we have R. A. Monroe Senator for the Greenbacks, and I. W. Hanscom, Representative for the Democrats. It is also expected that the Greenbackers will endorse the Democratic nominee for Representative. Notwithstanding all this Milo has got straight Republicans enough to come out first best.

One of the most wise and brilliant descriptions of King Solomon is that of the contrast between two opposing types of women of his times. A cardinal difference between the corresponding classes of to-day is, that one patronizes dressmakers altogether and the other takes Andrews' Bazar, and does much of her work at home. She can thus dress elegantly, and save her husband's purse. Send 10 cents to Cincinnati for specimen copy.

TRUE ECONOMY is not in buying the lowest priced articles. The best is cheapest. So with the fine cultivated and plantation grown spices imported by Messrs. Pinckney, Jackson & Co. of London and New York. I have just received a shipment of these goods and would specially invite the attention of all consumers to them. These spices are not only absolutely pure, but are without a doubt the finest ever imported into this country. I confidently recommend them as being really of unequaled merit.

ST. NICHOLAS for 1877,

Which opens with November, 1876, begins

A short and very entertaining serial from the French, "The Kingdom of the Greedy," a story adapted to the Thanksgiving season. Another serial of absorbing interest is

"HIS OWN MASTER," by J. T. Trowbridge, author of the "Jack Hazard" Stories, "Log-an in the Christmas Holly" by number.

Other serial stories, Christmas stories, lively sketches, poems and pictures for the holidays, and some astonishing illustrations of Oriental sports, with drawings by Matsoda artists, the Caribbean Sea, Jay Nimrod and Sea Serpent, specially illustrated, contains a very interesting paper,

"THE BOYS OF MY BOYHOOD," by William Cullen Bryant.

"The Horse Hotel," a lively article, by Charles A. Barnard, is well illustrated; "The Clock in the Sky," by Richard A. Proctor; "Uncommon Pets in their Homes or our Boy Scholars," by Dr. Eggleston; "The Peterkins' Christmas Tree," by Lucretia P. Hale, "Poetry and Carols of Winter," by Lucy Larcom, with pictures.

Dr. S. G. Hall's Boy's ST. NICHOLAS for the Christmas Holidays. ERICSON cents.

During the year there will be interesting papers for boys, by William Cullen Bryant, John G. Whittier, Thomas Hughes, William Howitt, Dr. Holland, George MacDonald, Sanford B. Hunt, Frank R. Stockton, and others.

There will be stories, sketches, and poems, of special interest to girls, by Lucretia P. Hale, Lucy Larcom, Susan Coolidge, Sarah Winter Kellogg, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, Louisa Alcott, Lucretia P. Hale, Celia Thaxter, Mary Mapes Dodge, and I know not how many other well-known writers.

TWELVE SPLENDID PICTURES, by Professor Proctor, the Astronomer, will appear, showing "The Stars of Each Month" which will be likely to surpass in interest any series of popular science ever before given to the public.

AMUSEMENT AND INSTRUCTION will FUN AND FROLIC, and WIT AND WISDOM, will be found, as heretofore, in ST. NICHOLAS. It will continue to delight the young and give pleasure to the old.

THE LONDON LITERARY WORLD says

"There is no magazine for the young that can be said to equal it. Neither is production of such high order as are the articles in ST. NICHOLAS. All the articles are interesting with stories. The literature and artistic illustrations are both superb."

The Boston Daily News says: "ST. NICHOLAS worthily sustains its reputation as the best juvenile publication that is our own periodical literature."

GOOD NEWS FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

To meet the demand for a cheaper ST. NICHOLAS, the publishers have issued the first two volumes, in an elegant library style, are sold for $10 (in full gilt, $15), and contain all that appeared in the complete set.
